

The Impact of Sports Leaders UK Awards and Qualifications

Year 1 evaluation summary findings

Jo Stuart and Jurgen Grotz
September 2015

What difference do Sports Leaders UK awards and qualifications make to learners who take the courses, Centres that deliver them and the wider community? These questions are explored in this bulletin which summarises findings from the first year of an evaluation of the Asda Active Sports Leaders project, co-funded by the Spirit of 2012 and Asda. This project aims to capitalise on the enthusiasm from the Olympic and Paralympic Games in London to create long lasting behavioural change through developing young leaders who deliver physical activity opportunities in their communities. The evaluation has been informed by research undertaken by the Institute for Volunteering Research (IVR) during 2014/5 which included a series of surveys, interviews, discussion groups and case studies with learners, Centre Managers and Tutors.

What is the impact on young learners?

- Learners reported that their participation in Sports Leaders UK awards and qualifications led to positive personal outcomes across a range of areas including gains in confidence, communication skills, team work and interest in the community.
- 92% of teenage learners said they were more confident about speaking in front of a group and 96% felt they had developed confidence in leading a group:

“It gave me so much confidence. Sports Leaders gave me the confidence to talk to people again. It gave me some worth and abilities I didn’t think I had”

- Teenagers developed skills in multiple areas including communicating with others (99%), leading others (99%) and team work (97%). They were positive about the transferability of these skills; 78% of teenagers said that the skills they had gained from the Sports Leaders UK courses could be used in the workplace ‘a lot’ or to ‘some’ extent.

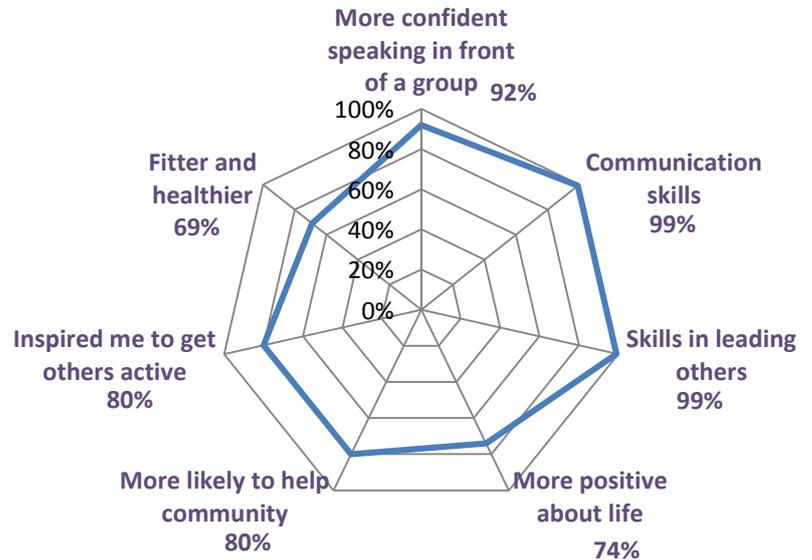

Figure: Impact of Sports Leaders UK courses on teenage learners

“The communication, leadership and all those skills has helped me become more confident and able to do different things....I became confident enough to speak to anyone”

“It has given me the confidence to pursue a career related to sport as I am currently studying an HND in coaching and developing sport. Sports Leaders has given me the ability to talk confidently to peers and children in coaching sessions”

- The Sports Leaders UK courses have helped encourage interest in the community; 80% of teenagers said that they were more likely to help the community as a result of their course and 80% felt inspired to get other people active.

“What I have found it has done is that I am getting more and more people involved in sport. Rather than increasing what I am doing, I am actually increasing what other people do because it has given us the tools to motivate other people”

What is the impact on Centres and the wider community?

Beyond the individual learners, the evaluation identified wider benefits of the Sports Leaders UK awards and qualifications to Centres delivering the awards and qualifications (such as schools, colleges and community organisations) and the wider community. These included:

- Helping centres to expand and enhance the learning opportunities they can offer;
- Helping to raise the profile of centres;
- Increasing centres' community engagement and links with the wider community; and
- Getting more people active in the community through activities and support provided by Sports Leader volunteers.